

Margaret Wolf Freivogel, St. Louis Beacon (<http://stlbeacon.org>)

The St. Louis Beacon, founded partly by ex-St. Louis Post-Dispatch journalists, is one of several non-profit regional news organizations (including Minneapolis-St. Paul, San Diego, Seattle and New Haven) which are exploring new forms of journalism as traditional print and broadcast outlets shrink. The Beacon focuses on news that matters to people in the St. Louis region and provides coverage with depth and context. It has no editorial position, but includes thoughtful discussion from many points of view. Rather than trying to compete for all conceivable breaking news items, the Beacon focuses on analysis, watchdog reporting and sustained attention to key issues.