Larceny was the most common criminal offense. Family members (intimate partner, parent, child), followed by acquaintances, and lastly, strangers.

Using National Incident Based Reporting System (NIBRS) data from 2019 and 2020, APD reported that:

- Perpetrators were most often:
  - Family members (intimate partner, parent, child)
  - Acquaintances
  - Strangers

White individuals comprise about 85.3% of Auburn’s population and most victims (84.8%) were White. Black individuals comprise about 8.7% of Auburn’s population, yet 34% of victims were Black.

Using CCS data and APD’s Victim Services Program (VSP) 2020 data:

- CCS served 508 victims
- VSP served 143 victims
- More likely to serve victims of sexual violence and child victims
- More commonly received Counseling & case management
- With the introduction of the VSP in ADP:
  - More victims engaged with the police, obtained orders of protection, and participated in other justice processes

Implications for Policy & Practice:
- Increase trauma-informed training and awareness of the VSP, so officers can share resources on-scene, even if police calls for service do not result in criminal charges.
- Consider outreach for financial or property crime victims. Though larceny was the most common offense, these victims were underrepresented among those served by the VSP.

Winter
Spring
Summer
Fall

Most offenses against persons occurred in the summer, but CCS served more victims in the winter.
